The ground of Mr. Holt's investive against neutrality is simple. Neutrality, he says, prosuppose indifference, and Kentucky, as a State of the Union, cannot without dishonor be indifferent between those who are fighting for the

The House has determined to confine itself exclusively to matters relevant to the Presidents call for e special session, which will render the session e short one, not extending beyond the present month. All matters which do not come strictly within this prescribed limit will be refersed to the appropriete committees and prepared for the winter session, which will be most emphatically a business one. There will be no opposition worthy of consideration to the full amount of men and money asked for by the President, for it is the manimous wish to lave the war prosecuted with viger as the means to estain a speedy peace. This can be done very readily. As the main army works its way into Virginii, occupying all the country north of the James river, detachments will be sent into Tennessee to support the liminist there, and simultaneously there will be flank movements by sea to occupy the ports of entry North Cardine (Logoria, Sc. These cities).

sent into Tennessee to support the I nionists there, and simultaneously there will be flank movements by sea to occupy the ports of entry in North Carolina. Georgia, &c. These cities will be held, the custom-houses reopened, and commerce released from its imprisonment, so that the great stuples of the South can go forward to their markets through the world without obstruction. Some may regard this movement as impracticable, and requiring a large expenditure of money and loss of life. This will prove incorrect. The commercial South does not sympathise with the secession movement, and the traction of the Islandist Home, and the first opportunity will be embraced to open relations with the outside world. The administration has indulaitably possessed itself fully in relation to the local feding in the Southern Atlantic cities before it originated this plan of operations, and therefore its success is certain. The besuifful strategy which will soon be developed cannot fail to seld to the military reputation of tion. Scott, It will accomplish the most important results and with the least possible effusion of blood.
